NAME Juan Gutierrez	DESCRIPTION Interphex Puerto Rico is a large conference and trade show for the pharmaceutical manufacturing sector. The meeting is held in Puerto Rico since almost half of US pharmaceutical manufacturing occurs on the island of Puerto Rico. The meeting is a widely attended event by companies working in pharmaceutical manufacturing in Puerto Rico, mainland US and South and Central America. See: http://www.interphexpuertorico.com . The meeting is expected to be attended over 300 plant managers, personal, vendors, consultants, and others involved in pharmaceutical manufacturing.	LOCATION San Juan, Puerto Rico	REED Exhibitions	Common carrier transportation	X		$650
				Meals		X	$20
				Lodging		X	$200
				Waiver of fees		X	$595

The meeting takes place on October 4 & 5, 2012.

I have been asked to speak and present ENERGY STAR awards on energy efficiency and greenhouse gas management in pharmaceutical manufacturing sector. The meeting organizers, Reed Exhibitions have offered to cover up to $644.30 in travel expenses (air fare and lodging). This offer has been made to all the speakers on the panel, which include representatives from pharmaceutical companies (Allergan and Schering Plough). The meeting organizers also waive registration fees for attending the conference and have offered lodging.

Reed Exhibitions (www.reedexpo.com) is a for profit company that organizes fee-based conferences and trade shows. The company is a subsidiary of Reed Elsevier which is a major publisher of academic journals. Interphex Puerto Rico meeting is one of the conferences they organize. The Interphex Puerto Rico meeting is sponsored by several professional societies and trade associations, including the International Society for Pharmaceutical Engineering (ISPE).

Because of rising energy prices and growing concern about global climate change, the meeting organizers are interested in creating an energy management track. Because of the ENERGY STAR program's work with the pharmaceutical manufacturing sector, I was contacted to speak at this event because I am ENERGY STAR representative for Region 2. I will also cover other volunteer programs that Pollution Prevention and Climate Change Section do outreach on, such as WaterSense and Designed for the Environment.

The Interphex Puerto Rico provides an excellent opportunity to conduct outreach to plant managers of pharmaceutical manufacturing facilities. Over the past several years the ENERGY STAR program has developed several different resources for the pharmaceutical manufacturing sector. In fact, the main audience we are trying to reach are non-regulated business such as hotels, commercial buildings, and so on.

The meeting also provides opportunity to meet and outreach to companies that have not been involved with the ENERGY STAR pharmaceutical focus (see: http://www.energystar.gov/index.cfm?c=in_focus.bus_pharmaceutical_focus). These types of companies include small pharmaceutical companies and contract manufacturers where it has been difficult to identify the right contact.

Participation in this meeting provides an important opportunity to gain further exposure for the ENERGY STAR program in the pharmaceutical manufacturing market and for Region 2. It also will enable the ENERGY STAR program to reach out to facilities in Puerto Rico which are an important base for the pharmaceutical industry but is a market that can be difficult to reach from New

	York City. It also is an opportunity to outreach and network with trade and economic development groups that work with Pharma sector in Puerto Rico. Because of high energy costs in Puerto Rico, there should be a strong incentive to use ENERGY STAR tools. Participating in this meeting helps support several Agency initiatives: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Energy Star - which is voluntary and relies on participating in meetings such as these. - Regional GHG objectives - there are limited venues for promoting initiatives designed to address these sectors in Puerto Rico If invitational travel to this meeting is approved, I plan to use the trip down to Puerto Rico to brief EPA Region 2 grantees based in Puerto Rico on ENERGY STAR and their Pollution Prevention Grants.

Elaine Hubal	The workshop will explore exposure determinants in high-throughput exposure assessment across a broad range of chemicals. The primary objective of the workshop is to identify the power and limitations of existing information through application of a case study. This case study will focus on immediate needs for consideration of exposure potential for large numbers of substances (i.e. rapid and high-throughput exposure assessment). Application of extant data and tools will be emphasized to address key assessment issues. A set of leading experts will be brought together to share their approaches and results. NAME Chad Schulze	DESCRIPTION To provide training in the field calibration of the mdfate model using actual field measurements of sediment transport near the Columbia River South Jetty. A formal comparison of the field measurements and model is consistent with scientific best practices, and close correspondence of results would be very useful in that it could provide confirmation that the model predictions are realistic. Training is to be provided to the State of Oregon Fish and Wildlife Department as described below. The purpose of the study is to provide a field verification of the USACOE's MDFATE computer model of sediment deposition thickness resulting from a novel "thin-layer" dredged material disposal technique under consideration for future disposal operations at the Mouth of the Columbia River (MCR). The State of Oregon's interest in the study relates to the potential impacts of dredged material disposal on marine biological resources of concern, particularly Dungeness Crab. A 2005 field test of the depth of thin-layer disposal was conducted, but the results were ambiguous because the Sediment Profile Image equipment employed during this test did not penetrate deep enough into the substrate to draw definitive conclusions about disposal layer thickness. The State is participating in the design of an experiment which would involve employing a team of scuba divers to collect in-situ measurements disposal layer thickness on the seafloor at the MCR, shortly before and after dredged material disposal. Scuba divers would deploy vertical reference gauges on the seafloor immediately prior to dredge disposal, and then attempt to take disposal thickness readings from the gauges immediately after disposal to measure dredged material (sediment) accumulation. The State has requested the assistance of the EPA dive team, because of their experience with underwater scientific data collection, and their present level of dive readiness. EPA divers will perform the dredged material measurement experiment, field test the research design, and transfer knowledge and experience gained from conducting the experiment to State of Oregon personnel, who will be present to observe and monitor the operation. EPA will prepare and provide a final dive report documenting the deployment methodology, discussing the results, and evaluating the workability, efficiency & accuracy of the method. A number of gauges will be deployed across the pre-planned dredge disposal trackline at selected points along the track. Deployment of 5	LOCATION Hammond, OR	Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife	Meals Lodging	X X		$310 $700 uniformly-spaced measurement devices across the disposal trackline (e.g., 1 in the middle, 2 mid-way (one on each side), and 2 near the outer edge (one on each side) of the trackline is presently being considered. Measurements of sediment thickness will be made by EPA divers at each gauge and recorded on waterproof paper, and the gauge will also be photographed or videotaped to provide a visual record. This procedure will be replicated in space along the disposal trackline near the beginning, middle, and end. If possible, this will be replicated for 2, and if possible, 3 disposal events, in addition to a single scientific control site at a similar nearby location (e.g., with respect to depth and approximate proximity to the river mouth), per scientific best practices for experimental designs. It is expected that executing this project will entail a minimum of 9 dives (3 dives per disposal trackline prior to disposal, 3 dives post-disposal along same trackline, and 3 dives for a control site), but the much preferred option would require an additional 6 dives to sample an additional disposal event and provide much needed replication. It is assumed that each of 5 measurement gauges deployed for each cross-track location will require only 1 dive to sample in its entirety.
